'Painting landscape is the connection between these artists and the heritage of the 20th century traditions developed over the last hundred years or more.

The diverse nature of art movements across Europe and eventually in the US in the first sixty years of the 20th century/loosened up painting practice, explored domains of the mind and expanded what was possible even to the landscapist.

The painters on show reveal just a few of the diverse ways we react to what we see. There are language differences between the painters on show. Values vary from painter to painter, almost they seem to inhabit different worlds. This I think is what makes the painting of environments so compelling.'

Lund Gallery is delighted to present this exhibition on the theme of landscape by painters whose individual practice touches on major developments in 20th century painting. Peter Hicks is known throughout the UK for his abstracted and visionary pairings of the British Landscape and in particular of the North York Moors, the place where he has lived and worked all his life. Exhibitions include The Myles Meehan Gallery Darlington, the Brian Sinfield Gallery and Messum's Cork Street. 2008 also sees the release of a publication and film of Peter working in the Esk Valley. In addition to exhibiting, Peter has enjoyed a long and distinguished career in teaching having held the post of Head of Art at Queen Elizabeth College Darlington and been visiting lecturer at Durham and Hull Universities. He still continues to inspire and encourage both aspiring and established artists today. Lund Gallery is grateful to Peter for his help in curating this exhibition.
